Keep your pet mobile – managing arthritis

Degenerative joint disease, commonly known as arthritis, affects around 20% of dogs and more than 40% of cats.

In cats, watch out for subtle changes, such as a poorly kept coat, low levels of activity, and behaviours that change as they adapt to the pain.

With your dogs, look for difficulty or reluctance to jump up and be handled or petted, a reduction in their capacity for exercise, or stiffness in movement.

Our team can diagnose arthritis, prescribe treatment and pain relief, and offer advice about the ways you can reduce symptoms to help make your pets more comfortable and mobile for longer.

Ways you can keep your pet happy with mobility challenges include:

- Joint supplements
- Special diets
- Managing their weight
- Making changes to their home environment, such as providing more warmth, bedding and ramps.

Are your pets up to date with their vaccinations?
Give us a call to talk about their needs.

Equine – tetanus focus

As tetanus is a life-threatening disease for animals, we recommend that all horses are vaccinated against it. Caused by the bacterium clostridium tetani, tetanus can gain access to a horse's body through 'risk events', such as wounds and hoof abscesses.

Book in with our team to get your horse's vaccinations up to date.
