HAPPY, HEALTHY PET NUTRITION

Our pets need to eat a nutritionally balanced diet, with the right balance of protein, carbohydrates, fat, vitamins and minerals.

Protein: builds muscle and tissues, and is needed for a healthy coat, skin and nails.

Carbohydrates: the main source of fuel, providing energy, keeping them bright and active.

Fats: an additional source of energy and required by every cell in our pets' bodies.

The correct balance of these elements in our pets' diets is important. Diets that contain too much fat and carbohydrates can lead to obesity-related health problems.

Vitamins and minerals are essential to facilitate the biochemical processes throughout the body, but are required in much smaller doses.

Not sure what's the right nutrition for your pet?

Ask the team for obligation-free advice to keep them happy and healthy.

EQUINE - FEC TEST FOR SPRING

Perform a Faecal Egg Count (FEC) test to distinguish which horses require targeted treatment for parasites during the spring.

Equine FEC - a great price!

$20 incl. GST

Up to 70% of equine properties in New Zealand now have some degree of drench resistance. This has led to changes in recommendations for equine parasite management.

Regular drenching based on calendar intervals, or blanket rotational drenching, is no longer recommended.

Instead, we recommend FEC testing all horses to see which ones are contributing the most to pasture contamination, and then only drenching those horses.

Talk to your equine vet about getting a risk-based deworming programme for your equine property.
